You are being offered a lease and you must not commit yourself to the lease unless you have read this message.

Business tenants normally have a right to stay in their business premises when the lease ends.

If you commit yourself to the lease, you will lose these important legal rights.

- You will have no right to stay in your business premises when the lease ends.
- Unless the landlord chooses to let you stay, you will need to leave the premises.
- You will be unable to claim compensation for your business premises, unless the lease specifically gives you this right.
- If the landlord offers you an alternative premises, you will not have the right to ask the court to fix the rent.

It is therefore important to get professional advice from a qualified surveyor, lawyer or accountant - before agreeing to give up these rights.

If you want to ensure that you can stay in your business premises when the lease ends, you should exclude the protection of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954.

If you receive this notice at least 14 days before you commit yourself to the lease, you will need to sign a simple declaration to accept its consequences, before you sign the lease.

But if you do not receive at least 14 days' notice, you must sign a "statutory" declaration. To do this, you must sign a declaration (or someone else empowered to do so on your behalf).

Unless there is a special reason for this, you must sign the declaration sooner, you may want to ask the landlord to let you stay in your business premises when the lease ends, you should consider whether you wish to exclude the protection of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954. If you do, you would only need to make a simple declaration, and sign it in front of a separate visit to an independent solicitor.
